

WAS A LIVELY TILT

Passage at Arms Between Senators Hale and Voorhees.

FAILURE TO VOTE THE CAUSE

Sensate Fankler, Turpie and Jones Argue Silver Hooper-Teller Will Speak Today.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Wolcott, calling for information as to the bounty paid on maple sugar having been laid before the senate, Mr. Wolcott expressed regret at the brusqueness of his response to Mr. Gallinger yesterday, and said that he wished now to modify his resolution in accordance with Mr. Gallinger's suggestion to cover all kinds of sugar. He therefore modified his resolution accordingly and it was agreed to.

Turpie and Ancient History. Mr. Turpie following Mr. Fankler, opened with what he called a study of the history of money for the last 400 years, and stated that it was not to be doubted that the syndicate of gold had favored the passage of the Sherman law, which now is deemed to have repealed it. He thought that there should be a re-nomination of subsidiary silver coin in the interest of the wage-earners. One of the strongest objections to the plan was that the standard of gold had favored the passage of the Sherman law, which now is deemed to have repealed it. He thought that there should be a re-nomination of subsidiary silver coin in the interest of the wage-earners.

Restoration of the silver dollar, the re-nomination of silver, will be great reform, but how shall these compare with the restoration of freedom of the ballot? The freedom of the ballot is the right of the people to elect their representatives. Millions of dollars with every presidential election, extorted from the people by unjust taxation have been expended to defraud and destroy the franchise. This malcontent dynasty of fraud and force is now entering the valley of death shadows. It is soon to be destroyed. The free ballot is worth more than free coinage. The people will, as far as public law may serve, decree liberty in all things, to all men within the metes and bounds of the republic.

Favored the Hooper. Mr. Jones of Arkansas was the next speaker. He favored the repeal of the Sherman act, not in part, but the whole. He did not believe that the Sherman act had been the cause of the financial troubles of the country; and he believed that they would pass away without the repeal of the act. He would vote against the pending bill and would resist its enactment into law as long as possible, unless it were coupled with some measure recognizing silver and providing for an expansion of the volume of the country's currency.

Mr. Puffer moved a resolution which went over till tomorrow; calling for information as to whether the national banks of Boston, New York and Philadelphia had failed to keep and maintain their bank reserves as required by law; whether they had refused to pay the deposits of checks in currency and as to other conduct of the banks.

At 3:40 proceedings in the senate seemed to have come to a standstill. No senator sought the floor. This led Mr. Voorhees to express the hope that the senate would adjourn early. If there was no senator desirous to speak now, he would have to ask for a vote on the bill. Mr. Hale hoped that the senator from Indiana would not consent to an immediate adjournment. The senate had been in session now for six weeks, and it was not probable that the president had had before congress, and now at the end of six weeks he was simply suggesting that the senate should sit for more than four hours a day, and not adjourn at the end. With the exception of the senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman)—the veteran leader on financial measures—and perhaps one or two others, the republican senators in favor of repeal had already said in their seats, ready to adjourn at any time, and were taking up some of the time of the senate.

Voorhees Got Mad. Mr. Voorhees had listened to these remarks with unmeasured impatience and anger, rose to reply to them. He said that the seat of the senator from Maine had been occupied very early in the session. He wanted action the next day after the president's message was read. He wanted the finance committee to report a bill the next day and to bring it to a vote immediately. That was an utter impossibility, an absurdity, and the senate would not do it. The discussion is for no other purpose than to advertise to the public that there is a keen desire for action on that side of the chamber and for delay on this side. There is no delay that it is possible to seek. Let the senator, said Mr. Voorhees, bring his speech to the next time that he takes to the senate.

LIQUOR MONEY.

Cannot Be Retained for School Taxes. Liability of Treasurer.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 8.—Attorney General Ellis has rendered an opinion at the request of S. D. Shaffer, treasurer of Midland county, whether the county treasurer can retain liquor money due the city of Midland for delinquent school taxes of 1902. He holds that it cannot be so retained.

In response to an inquiry from Wilson Mann, township treasurer of Harbor Springs, Attorney General Ellis answers the question as to whether a township treasurer is liable for the funds of a township deposited by him in good faith in a bank, which afterwards becomes insolvent. He holds that township treasurers are not liable for moneys lost by banks.

DIG BLAZE IN BAY CITY.

Eddy Mill and Saw Block Burned. Loss $100,000.

BAY CITY, Mich., Sept. 8.—The saw mill and saw block of Eddy, Avery & Eddy was destroyed by fire early this morning. The loss is about $100,000; the insurance $60,000.

No one knows how the fire started. The millwright inspected the property at 6 o'clock, and half an hour later the whole mill was in flames. The lumber docks were saved.

The mill was built in 1860 and rebuilt in 1873. It had a sawing capacity of 25,000,000 feet, and had already sawed 18,000,000 feet this season. It will probably be rebuilt. The mill was owned by the Eddy Eddy heirs and John T. Eddy of Bay City, and the Newell Avery heirs of Detroit.

When Women May Vote.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 8.—Charles D. Barboorn of Luther has written Attorney General Ellis to inquire if the mother of children included in the school census, or a woman guardian, neither of them being taxpayers, are entitled to vote at school elections.

The attorney-general says that the question depends entirely upon the particular act under which the election is held. If the district is organized under the general school law, the woman suffrage act of 1890 would not affect in the least the right of women to vote. This act simply attempts to place women upon the same footing with men; but its object was not to abridge the right of women to vote at school meetings, nor to extend to them any right not possessed by male citizens of the district. Under the general school law there are two classes of persons who are entitled to vote. The first are taxpayers; the second, guardians or parents of children included in the school census. Under this law, also, a male citizen, who is over 21 years of age and resides in a school district but who is neither a taxpayer, parent or guardian, would not be entitled to vote, and as women are simply placed upon the same basis as men, they would be able to exercise no further rights under the woman suffrage act. The school laws do not require registration.

The theory is that the robbers thought he had the valuable pouches when they captured him. There is no trace of the men.

DESERTED BRIDE SUICIDED.

Mrs. Popper Found Dead in the Gault House.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Mrs. Lella Popper, a wife for scarcely forty-eight hours, shot and killed herself in the Gault house shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. Believing herself deserted by her husband she loaded the weapon which she had purchased a short time before, and after writing a few words pathetic in every syllable discharged the deadly projectile into her own breast.

An investigation of the room and its contents told a strange story. Lying upon the floor, very close to the bed, having evidently fallen from the suicide's hand, was a novel entitled "Where Love Begins." The closing page, torn stained and wrinkled, was exposed. It was a romantic story and perhaps Mrs. Popper's eyes had remained upon the little word final for some time before her gloomy thoughts induced her to end her life. Written in a feminine hand upon the blank leaf opposite the concluding page were the words: "It is hard to find one's self forsaken in a strange place."

The police are endeavoring to discover the whereabouts of Berthold Popper, the husband, who is supposed to have deserted his wife.

The attendance was not so large and the accommodations were not so good. Many of the grand army men, however, were present. ## TO HAVE A FISH EXHIBIT.

Western Michigan Fair Will Have Twenty Aquaria.

Owing to hard work and excellent judgment on the part of Comptroller H. W. Davis there will be a new feature added to the exhibits at Comstock Park fair grounds during the coming fair. It will be an exhibit of the fish produced in the state fisheries of the state. Superintendent Foxworth of the state hatchery will probably be here Monday or Tuesday to take charge of the arrangements and will remain here until the fair closes. There will be at least twenty aquaria placed in the center of the main hall directly under the great dome. These tanks will be fed with spring water from the pipes laid in the grounds and connected with the springs in the hillsides near by.

The last legislature appropriated $50,000 for the maintenance of this department for two years, while the state of Ohio appropriated but $12,000 for the same time. Michigan is aware of the value to the state of providing so valuable, cheap and dainty an article of food for its people as is possible, only by the artificial culture of fish.

The exhibit will be made on the same general plan as the fresh water fish exhibit at the world's fair. There is no doubt but it will prove one of the most attractive features of the Western Michigan fair. Mr. Davis brought the matter up at the last meeting of the commissioners several weeks ago, but it was not until yesterday that it was fully decided to make the exhibit.

NESTER WOODWORTH.

His Funeral Held From the Residence in Plainfield Yesterday.

He moved here from Covent, Seneca county, New York, where he spent the greater portion of his life. Mr. Woodworth was prominent in politics in his younger days and was a member of the New York assembly in 1858-60. In 1861 he was injured in the disastrous wreck on the Michigan Central railroad at Jackson. Spinal trouble resulted from the accident and his death was due to complications arising. Mr. Woodworth's first wife was a sister of the first wife of N. R. Johnston of The Eagle. He left five children: Irving Woodworth, Mary Woodworth and George Woodworth of this city; Edwin Woodworth of Cedar Rapids, supervisor of Solon township; and Mrs. Harriet Clapp of Covent, New York.

RETURNED FROM INDIANAPOLIS.

The City Was Not Equal to the Demands of the Crowd.

Local Grand Army posts returned yesterday from the national encampment at Indianapolis. Many of the members, however, went to Chicago to attend the centennial of Grand Army day today. Edward Racine of Custer post said upon his return that the encampment was not so much of a success this year as it has been in former years. The attendance was not so large and the accommodations were not so good. Many of the grand army men, however, were present. Women's Relief corps were compelled to sleep in the open air on the public square. Men could be seen lying on the sidewalk at night, being unable to find more convenient places to sleep.

ENDED IN A DIAW.

The Gaffney-Fallon Boat a Very Tame Affair.

About 200 sports saw a tame ten-round go between William Gaffney of Detroit and J. J. Fallon of this city. It was all one-sided, the boy from the City of the Straits winning as he pleased. The waits before the match go were more than tedious. Bert Stiel and Len Thompson looked out for Fallon, while Johnny Roach and Dick Roach officiated for Gaffney. Charles Gallagher was referee and Eddie Smith time-keeper.

The fun opened with three two-minute rounds between Mark Gaffney and Charles Gallagher. The referee, Eddie Smith, announced that it was a friendly contest, and he told the truth—it was lovely. Gaffney's superior reach made a monkey of Gallagher, whose forte was knocking, if one could judge of the very tame and bland exhibition. No decision.

Entertained Friends.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Owing to the immense success of the beautiful opening, entitled "The Tycoon's Revue," Manager Smith has decided to run it another week longer, with an entire change of songs and specialties introduced.

One of the many reasons why "Hard Across the Sea" always interests and plays to crowded houses, is that it is superbly mounted, the scenery is elaborate and beautiful, there are many novel features and the audience is again and again surprised by some unexpected revelation in the rising of the curtains.

"Blunders," a monumental comedy skit, will hold The Grand all next week.

TRADE ON THE MEND

Textile, Metal and Iron Industries to Start Up.
